FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Interactive web mapping application unveiled offering layered information about Weatherford

Users will now have the ability to easily access layered information to explore Weatherford through customizable tools and maps.

WEATHERFORD (CITY OF WEATHERFORD), Texas – Exploring Weatherford just got much easier! The City of Weatherford is excited to unveil a new interactive web mapping application that allows users to explore many different layers of information from a variety of city departments.

Users can now access layered information regarding City and County offices, police and fire districts, garbage and recycle schedules, school districts and boundaries, zoning, subdivisions, utilities and much more. By clicking on features in the map, residents can open a pop-up window that contains additional information about particular layers.

“We are extremely excited to offer an innovative technology that allows users to explore Weatherford in a more in-depth fashion,” said Director of Information Technology Troy Garvin. “Development of the new interactive web mapping application took several months when considering research and design. The staff members behind this project worked diligently to make sure everything was correct and are a true example of the talent within our organization.”

Data is updated regularly to ensure residents are viewing the most up-to-date information. The City also created a tool that allows residents to enter a City of Weatherford address and create a “City Services” report based on that location. This report includes a map of the address location as well as the corresponding services such as emergency service districts, waste collection schedules, property information and school districts for specific property.

“The new mapping application is a great example of our technological capabilities,” said City Manager Sharon Hayes. “This project was done in-house from start to finish by our Information Technology Department. Geographic Information System (GIS) Analyst Austin Nichols, led the project from beginning to end and was able to develop a tool that not only City staff can use, but the public can use as well.”

The new interactive web mapping application is available by visiting the City’s website or by going directly to <https://gis.weatherfordtx.gov/map>. The web map can be viewed on most computers,
